

|  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
|--|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|  | Object: Atelecylidae, Atelecylus undecimdentatus Museum: Museum für Naturkunde ChemnitzMoritzstraße 2009111 Chemnitz+49(0)371 4884551info@naturkunde-chemnitz.de Collection: Wirbellose Inventory number: I-123-D |
|--|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

Description

Diese Krabben-Art wurde im Atlantik gefunden.
Sie lebt flach eingegraben in Sand.

Basic data

|                     |                        |
|---------------------|------------------------|
| Material/Technique: | Naturobjekt präpariert |
| Measurements:       | LxBxH 6 x 4 x 2 cm     |

Events

|                            |       |                |
|----------------------------|-------|----------------|
| Found                      | When  |                |
|                            | Who   |                |
|                            | Where | Atlantic Ocean |
|                            | When  |                |
| [Relationship to location] | Who   |                |
|                            | Where | Atlantic Ocean |
|                            |       |                |

Keywords

- Brachyura
- Sand